

2024 Fall Semester

TA-Ship Scholarship Application guideline for NCHU International Students

Eligibility and Requirements

- NCHU international graduate students in master or doctoral programs are eligible to apply for teaching assistantships.
- The applicant may choose one courses, and which should be taught in English. (including general studies, laboratory courses, and internship courses.), listed in the NCHU Course Information System.
- To facilitate the application process, students are highly recommended to consult with the course instructor before submitting the application for a TA assistantship.
- Each TA can serve as the teaching assistant for only one course.
- Students who have already been granted the Taiwan Scholarship/ Elite Scholarship/ICDF scholarship cannot apply for this program.

TA Responsibilities

A teaching assistant (TA) assists in the instruction under the supervision of a course instructor (professor).

The TA primarily assists the instructor in charge of the course by conducting discussion or laboratory sections that supplement faculty lectures. More information about responsibilities will be decided by the course instructor. However, duties typically required of all TAs are:

- Attend all instructor-TA meetings.
- Attend all lectures of the course they are TA-ing.
- Lead one or more discussion or lab sections as agreed at the time of TA assignment.
- Assist with grading and proctoring.
- Hold office hours or cover Help Room.
- Perform other duties as needed for each course, such as quizzes, preparation for sections, and lab demonstrations.

Performance Evaluations and Standards

- TAs are evaluated by both the course instructor and the students they teach.
- TAs need to submit a work diary (job record) once a week. Failure to do so may result in action by the OIA.

Scholarship Information

- NTD$5,000 from September to December (total of NTD$20,000 per semester).

How to Apply
